OLIVESCOOP

The Litter Savings Plan

Five habits that cut your monthly litter bill without cutting a single corner on hygiene.

Your monthly litter cost is two numbers multiplied together: what a litre costs, and how many litres your routine burns through. Prices are set by the shop. The litres are set by you. These five habits are how careful households land at the bottom of every cost range, whatever litter they use.

1 Fill to 5 to 7 cm, no more

Overfilling is the most common silent cost. Depth beyond what clumping needs just rides along into the bin at every reset. Mark the right level on the tray side once and stop guessing.

2 Scoop daily, without fail

Left too long, urine migrates and contaminates litter that would otherwise have stayed clean. Daily scooping is odour control and cost control in the same ten-second motion.

3 Let clumps set before you scoop

A fresh clump lifted too soon crumbles and takes clean litter with it. Give it a few minutes to firm up and it lifts out whole, leaving the rest of the tray untouched.

4 Change the tray by condition, not the calendar

Scoop daily, top up as needed, and do the full change when the tray's use and condition call for it: a smell that survives scooping, a damp or discoloured base, or clumps sticking to the bottom. A well-scooped single-cat tray earns you weeks; resetting early doubles your usage for no gain.

5 Buy the bigger format once you're settled

Multipacks and larger bags reliably beat small bags per litre. Once you know a litter works for your cat, size up and let storage do the saving. Store bags resealed and dry so nothing is wasted to damp.

Your weekly tune-up (tick as you go)

- [ ] Litter depth still at the 5 to 7 cm mark in every tray
- [ ] Scooped every day this week (twice daily in multi-cat homes)
- [ ] Tray condition checked: smell, base, clump release
- [ ] Bag resealed and stored somewhere dry
- [ ] Clump count and size roughly normal for your cat (a free health check)

Work out your own household's number, and what your current routine bins in still-clean litter every year, with the free calculator this plan came from: olivescoop.co.uk/blog/cat-litter-cost-per-month

The cheapest experiment in this plan: your cat's own verdict.

OliveScoop is made from 100% upcycled olive pits: strong clumping, low dust, unscented.

First bag free, just £5 delivery, at olivescoop.co.uk